F451

F451 have shot to the top of the Essex scene in the last 6 months like an angry punk comet – and new EP The Battleground Is Everywhere shows the band at the peak of their unsigned potential.

F451 hammer out the politics of RATM and the Manics, the anthemic British tunes of Muse, and the genuine anger of original punk.

In Battleground they've forged everything that's made them what they are – fury, honesty, politics, anthemic tunes, and conviction rarely seen in other bands either signed or underground. Their live sets are on fire, and in a scene bloated with indie and emo posers, F451 bring a surge of honesty and legitimacy back into rock music.

After the ferocious catchiness of The New Empire and the full-on politics of The Catastrophe EP, The Battleground Is Everywhere presents F451 full of strength, vitality, fury and honesty, and brings a startling glimpse of what should be the most important underground album of 2007. With the defiant joy of "We Are Youth", the blazing runaway funk of "Bass & Bombs", and the rousing nowhere-town anthem "This Could Be Anywhere", this is The Battleground Is Everywhere, and this is F451.
